Tokyo is a range of ceramic elements for the bathroom designed by Marco Glia. Characterized by the theme of water, the fluid and dynamic lines of the bathroom fittings bear witness to a design that reconciles formal research and innovation. The sinuous and soft shapes that distinguish the design of the Tokyo bathroom range, coherent in both solutions, the wall-mounted one, render it a versatile product that is especially suited to meet the requirement of the contract and hoteling sector, as well as those of the home.

The CURVE ceramic wash basin resembles a coiled paper ribbon acting more as a boundary confining its water than as an actual basin. Designed in Italy, it is the result of an eclectic and ingenious creativity that does not overlook the functional aspect of the objects. The line includes two bench & Curve is also a free-standing: an elegant object with an intriguing shape and strong personality that affects the surrounding space. Though born as free-standing, it can be fixed to the wall.
